BWW Interviews: Walking The Line with MILLION DOLLAR QUARTET's Johnny Cash, Scott Moreau

By: Analisa Swerczek Feb. 05, 2014

Hi Scott! First of all, thank you so much for taking the time to talk with BroadwayWorld in Omaha!

Thank you!

Let's start at the beginning. When did you know that you wanted to become a performer?

Well, I'd say that I realized that I wanted to be a performer later in life. I mean, I always used to sing when I was little. My parents would put on records and I'd sing along and dance around. I actually wanted to be a pro baseball player when I was younger. But my parents took me to see shows growing up, and I started to think that it might not be a bad idea for me. We went on a trip abroad, and ended up seeing Les Miserables in London, and I remember saying to myself, "Yup. That's it. That's what I want to do." I started looking at schools to learn more about musical theatre, and have been working professionally ever since I graduated.

Looking at your resume, I see that one of your earlier professional credits came from your five years with the Nebraska Theatre Caravan's touring production of A Christmas Carol. Can you tell me a little bit about how you got involved with that and if/how that experience helped prepare you for where you are today?

First of all, I would like to say that I am looking forward to being in Omaha for many reasons. I haven't been there for almost seven years, and I love that city. I love the Omaha Community Playhouse, and still have some very dear friends there from my Caravan days that I am excited to see. I really can't wait to be down there.

When it comes to playing Johnny Cash, he walks – and talks – the line

Scott Moreau, who grew up in Litchfield, has made a living out of portraying the Man in Black, including in 'Ring of Fire,' opening this week at Portland Stage.

Singing the songs of Johnny Cash the way Johnny Cash sang them requires practice and repetition. For Scott Moreau, whose natural voice is a lyrical baritone with a sweet, bright quality, finding the rugged bottom end that's required to effectively sing the songs of Johnny Cash does not come naturally or without effort.

"I am sure people assume I open my mouth and it just comes out, but a lot of trial and error – and a lot of time – goes into it," said Moreau, 41, who grew up in Litchfield and whose uncanny ability to sing like Johnny Cash has taken him from Maine to stages across the country and around the world.

Review: Scott Moreau Celebrates the Man in Black

By: Carla Maria Verdino-Süllwold Jun. 18, 2019

Maine State Music Theatre kicked off its Monday Concert Series with three sold-out performances (June 15-17) of Scott Moreau's original Johnny Cash tribute concert, WALKIN' THE LINE. Moreau's identification with Cash is deep and unerring, and he brings to his portrayal of the iconic singer not only a mellifluous bass-baritone, but also the skills of a fine actor combining them into a truly remarkable theatrical experience.

Moreau has played Cash countless times in MILLION DOLLAR QUARTET on national tour and in regional theatres across the country, as well as performing RING OF FIRE, another concert program based on Cash's music, but WALKIN' THE LINE is his own creation, and it has special substance and flow. From the instant he steps to the microphone and says, "Hello, I'm Johnny Cash," we believe him entirely, and for the next two plus hours, Moreau takes his audience on a journey through Cash's greatest hits - arranged roughly in chronological order - as he sets each of them in context with anecdotes and snatches of dialogue. The twenty-six numbers are sequenced to create an appealing flow, alternating rousing pieces with more soulful ballads. His conversation with the audience, written as if Cash were delivering it in his own day, often has an uncanny contemporaneity - such as when he talks about veterans or war (Cash in the Vietnam era, but applicable to today's conflicts and crises.)

As a vocalist, Moreau offers a real treat: an ebony bass-baritone capable of astoundingly secure notes below the staff, silky, sexy, cajoling and compelling without any of the gravelly sound of the late Cash, himself. Moreau also captures perfectly Cash's twang and the cadences of his Arkansas speech, and he has mastered the singer's gestures, physical stance, way of handling a guitar, and little facial quirks.

Johnny Cash tribute artist brings storytelling show to Troy

"I think the whole point of theater, and the whole reason that people want to go and see something like this, is to be transported back to another time and another place."

For more than a decade, Scott Moreau has traveled the world performing as Johnny Cash. In 2012, he wrote an original show, called "Walkin' the Line," based on interviews, anecdotes and portions of Johnny's autobiography, featuring more than 25 of the country legend's best-loved songs — a swath ranging from the mid-1950s to the 1990s American Recordings.

He's bringing his Ultimate Johnny Cash show to the Arbogast Performing Arts Center in Troy. The performance is on Jan. 11.

Singer-actor walks the line with Johnny Cash tribute

By Bridgette M. Redman, Peoria Times Contributing Writer Feb 1, 2021 Updated Feb 26, 2024

Nine years ago, Scott Moreau took his years of experience performing as Johnny Cash and created a show for Arizona music lovers that has since traveled the country. Now, in 2021, it returns to the Valley with Moreau performing the one-man show at Arizona Broadway Theater from Friday, Jan. 29, to Feb. 21.

"It was the winter of 2012," Moreau said. "(The show) was created for the good people of Arizona. J.R. McAlexander, the owner-operator of Showtune Productions out in the Valley, we've been colleagues for about 20 years, and while I was on the first national tour of 'Million Dollar Quartet,' he reached out and said a tribute to Johnny Cash would sell very well with his patrons in Arizona."

Moreau took a week off from the tour and headed to the Valley. He started piecing together the Cash songs he wanted to sing and looking into anecdotes and stories of the singer. He strove to include Cash's verbatim words in the musical tribute he would create called "Walkin' the Line."
